

Message from the Editors to our ad hoc Reviewers

All papers submitted for publication in Neurology undergo peer review.* Neurology papers have at least two ad hoc reviewers, and the majority have three or more reviewers. For example, in this particular issue 78% of the articles received at least one re-review by an ad hoc reviewer. For the approximately 3,000 papers Neurology receives each year, well over 10,000 reviews are obtained.

Neurology depends upon the dedication, skill, and commitment of our ad hoc reviewers. The mean time from manuscript submission to initial decision has been decreased to less than 3 weeks. Expedited papers are usually peer reviewed within 14 days. A recent example in Neurology was the expedited paper, "DBS and diathermy interaction induces severe CNS damage" (Nutt JG, Anderson VC, Peacock JH, Hammerstad JP, and Burchiel KL. 2001;56:1384–1386). It was peer-reviewed and accepted within 7 days of submission and was published 10 weeks from submission.

Our reviewers are expert and experienced. When we ask for the assistance of a new reviewer we always obtain at least two reviews from established experts. The busiest, most senior leaders in clinical neuroscience are among our best and most timely reviewers. The rewards for reviewers include the knowledge that they are contributing to good science, the opportunity to gain perspective on their field, and the experience that improves their own ability to write effectively. Good reviewers are excellent mentors and clinical neuroscientists.

Our reviewers work anonymously. Neither the authors nor the other reviewers know their identity. However, the Editors know and have the highest admiration for these established and emerging leaders in their fields of expertise.

Listed below are the reviewers who completed reviews in the 6 months between October 2000 and March 2001. Those with an asterisk reviewed five or more papers, and those with two asterisks reviewed 10 or more—and many of them reviewed 20 or more. An increasing number of our reviewers are from outside the United States. These reviewers' timeliness and care equal that of reviewers from the United States.

The Editors thank the following reviewers who contributed their time and expertise to the success of Neurology.
